About Institute:	Govt degree college Talwari-Tharali is located in a picturesque region harvested by Pinder River at its foothill in Chamoli district. At an altitude of 1760 m, the campus is surrounded by diverse vegetation and an awe-inspiring view of Trishul range of Himalayas. Nature has endowed the college area with enchanting greenery, fascinating sight and rare Deodar Trees (Himalayan Cedar). The college came into existence in the year of 1997 after a long standing struggle by the local people. The College started with 12 undergraduate courses which comprised of six humanities and five science courses. Initially run in two tin sheds, the college has progressively acquired spacious and well planned buildings for the different approved UG and PG courses. Well equipped labs of the science departments compliment the college infrastructure greatly. Library of the College houses diversified books to satisfy the curious minds of young scholars. The college has a vibrant in-house culture of debate, discussion and open ended dialogues. In the region of scattered population, the college boasts a currently enrolled strength of around 500 students who come from varied socio-economic backgrounds. Geographically, the institution attracts students from a radius of around 25 Km in the difficult terrain of central Himalayas. A Decent teacher-student ratio of the college not only enhances the efficacy of teaching learning activities but also works towards the progression of student makes one on one interaction among the teachers and students possible. Traditionally women have been kept away from higher education in the remote less developed parts of the country due to inaccessibility and social backwardness. Being the only such institution in the border region of Chamoli-Bageshwar district and the female student share of over 80%, the college is playing a pivotal role towards women empowerment.
